The Georgetown Journal of International Affairs is the official semi-annual publication of the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University. We provide our readers with perspectives on the most critical international affairs issues today by giving voice to leading academics, policy-makers, and analysts from six continents.

Among our past contributors are 10 ambassadors and 6 heads of state. As testament to the unparalleled quality of our publication, Journal articles are regularly excerpted by the Chronicle of Higher Education and PricewaterhouseCoopers’ Executive Digest and frequently used in classrooms from Harvard, Princeton, and Georgetown Universities to the National Defense University.

Advertising with us means reaching a high-quality audience of professionals, executives, and students around the world--a reader base with strong international focus. Currently, we offer space for two advertising options: print and online.

“Unique and original in its themes and focus, the Journal would add breadth and insight to the library of anyone interested in international affairs.”

Michael J. Mazarr, Professor and Associate Dean, US National War College
